the 1990s, the industry has been hit hard by a combination of factors. The most significant of these is the decline in the number of new entrants, which has led to a concentration of market share among a few large firms. This has resulted in a less competitive environment, with higher prices and lower quality of service. Another major factor is the increasing cost of raw materials, which has put pressure on profit margins. Finally, the industry has been affected by a number of regulatory changes, which have increased the cost of doing business and reduced the flexibility of firms to respond to market conditions. As a result, the industry is facing a period of significant restructuring, with many firms being forced to close or merge. This is likely to result in a more concentrated industry, with a few large firms dominating the market. While this may lead to more efficient production and lower costs, it is also likely to result in a loss of competition and a reduction in the quality of service. Therefore, it is important for the industry to find ways to maintain competition and ensure that consumers continue to receive high-quality products and services.
