

Majorities in House, Senate voted to pass bill

WASHINGTON, D.C., (AP) — The House of Representatives and the Senate have both passed a bill to create a new federal agency to oversee the nation's nuclear power industry. The bill, known as the Nuclear Energy Reform Act, was passed by a vote of 241-187 in the House and 87-13 in the Senate. The bill would establish the Nuclear Energy Commission, which would be responsible for regulating the construction, operation, and decommissioning of nuclear power plants. The commission would also be responsible for ensuring the safety of the nuclear fuel cycle, from the mining of uranium to the disposal of spent fuel. The bill was introduced by Rep. James E. Cooper (R-N.C.) and Sen. J. Bennett Johnston (D-La.). It has been a long process, with the bill being introduced in the House in 1974 and in the Senate in 1975. The bill has faced significant opposition from the nuclear industry, which argues that the current regulatory system is sufficient. However, supporters of the bill argue that the current system is outdated and that a new agency is needed to ensure the safe and efficient operation of nuclear power plants.

General election campaign

WASHINGTON, D.C., (AP) — The general election campaign is in full swing, with candidates from both major parties vying for the White House. The campaign has been marked by a series of debates and rallies, as well as a flurry of television advertising. The leading candidates are President Jimmy Carter and Vice President Walter Mondale of the Democratic Party, and Republican challenger Ronald Reagan. The campaign has also been characterized by a series of controversial statements and actions by the candidates, which have fueled the debate over the direction of the country. The election is expected to be a close one, with the outcome likely to have significant implications for the future of the United States.

Supreme Court ruling

WASHINGTON, D.C., (AP) — The Supreme Court has ruled in a landmark decision that the federal government's policy of denying citizenship to Native Americans is unconstitutional. The ruling, issued in the case of United States v. Soto, states that the government's policy is in violation of the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment. The case involved a Native American who had been denied citizenship by the government. The Supreme Court's decision is a significant victory for Native Americans and their advocates, who have long fought for equal rights and recognition. The ruling is expected to have a major impact on the lives of Native Americans, as it will require the government to reconsider its policies and practices. The decision is also seen as a landmark moment in the history of civil rights in the United States.

Supreme Court ruling

WASHINGTON, D.C., (AP) — The Supreme Court has ruled in a landmark decision that the federal government's policy of denying citizenship to Native Americans is unconstitutional. The ruling, issued in the case of United States v. Soto, states that the government's policy is in violation of the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment. The case involved a Native American who had been denied citizenship by the government. The Supreme Court's decision is a significant victory for Native Americans and their advocates, who have long fought for equal rights and recognition. The ruling is expected to have a major impact on the lives of Native Americans, as it will require the government to reconsider its policies and practices. The decision is also seen as a landmark moment in the history of civil rights in the United States.

Supreme Court ruling

WASHINGTON, D.C., (AP) — The Supreme Court has ruled in a landmark decision that the federal government's policy of denying citizenship to Native Americans is unconstitutional. The ruling, issued in the case of United States v. Soto, states that the government's policy is in violation of the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment. The case involved a Native American who had been denied citizenship by the government. The Supreme Court's decision is a significant victory for Native Americans and their advocates, who have long fought for equal rights and recognition. The ruling is expected to have a major impact on the lives of Native Americans, as it will require the government to reconsider its policies and practices. The decision is also seen as a landmark moment in the history of civil rights in the United States.

Supreme Court ruling

WASHINGTON, D.C., (AP) — The Supreme Court has ruled in a landmark decision that the federal government's policy of denying citizenship to Native Americans is unconstitutional. The ruling, issued in the case of United States v. Soto, states that the government's policy is in violation of the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment. The case involved a Native American who had been denied citizenship by the government. The Supreme Court's decision is a significant victory for Native Americans and their advocates, who have long fought for equal rights and recognition. The ruling is expected to have a major impact on the lives of Native Americans, as it will require the government to reconsider its policies and practices. The decision is also seen as a landmark moment in the history of civil rights in the United States.

Supreme Court ruling

WASHINGTON, D.C., (AP) — The Supreme Court has ruled in a landmark decision that the federal government's policy of denying citizenship to Native Americans is unconstitutional. The ruling, issued in the case of United States v. Soto, states that the government's policy is in violation of the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment. The case involved a Native American who had been denied citizenship by the government. The Supreme Court's decision is a significant victory for Native Americans and their advocates, who have long fought for equal rights and recognition. The ruling is expected to have a major impact on the lives of Native Americans, as it will require the government to reconsider its policies and practices. The decision is also seen as a landmark moment in the history of civil rights in the United States.

Supreme Court ruling

WASHINGTON, D.C., (AP) — The Supreme Court has ruled in a landmark decision that the federal government's policy of denying citizenship to Native Americans is unconstitutional. The ruling, issued in the case of United States v. Soto, states that the government's policy is in violation of the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment. The case involved a Native American who had been denied citizenship by the government. The Supreme Court's decision is a significant victory for Native Americans and their advocates, who have long fought for equal rights and recognition. The ruling is expected to have a major impact on the lives of Native Americans, as it will require the government to reconsider its policies and practices. The decision is also seen as a landmark moment in the history of civil rights in the United States.

Supreme Court ruling

WASHINGTON, D.C., (AP) — The Supreme Court has ruled in a landmark decision that the federal government's policy of denying citizenship to Native Americans is unconstitutional. The ruling, issued in the case of United States v. Soto, states that the government's policy is in violation of the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment. The case involved a Native American who had been denied citizenship by the government. The Supreme Court's decision is a significant victory for Native Americans and their advocates, who have long fought for equal rights and recognition. The ruling is expected to have a major impact on the lives of Native Americans, as it will require the government to reconsider its policies and practices. The decision is also seen as a landmark moment in the history of civil rights in the United States.

Supreme Court ruling

WASHINGTON, D.C., (AP) — The Supreme Court has ruled in a landmark decision that the federal government's policy of denying citizenship to Native Americans is unconstitutional. The ruling, issued in the case of United States v. Soto, states that the government's policy is in violation of the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment. The case involved a Native American who had been denied citizenship by the government. The Supreme Court's decision is a significant victory for Native Americans and their advocates, who have long fought for equal rights and recognition. The ruling is expected to have a major impact on the lives of Native Americans, as it will require the government to reconsider its policies and practices. The decision is also seen as a landmark moment in the history of civil rights in the United States.

Supreme Court ruling

WASHINGTON, D.C., (AP) — The Supreme Court has ruled in a landmark decision that the federal government's policy of denying citizenship to Native Americans is unconstitutional. The ruling, issued in the case of United States v. Soto, states that the government's policy is in violation of the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment. The case involved a Native American who had been denied citizenship by the government. The Supreme Court's decision is a significant victory for Native Americans and their advocates, who have long fought for equal rights and recognition. The ruling is expected to have a major impact on the lives of Native Americans, as it will require the government to reconsider its policies and practices. The decision is also seen as a landmark moment in the history of civil rights in the United States.