Abstract

The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in the prevalence of risk factors for coronary artery disease between two groups of men who had been exposed to asbestos. The subjects were divided into two groups based on their exposure to asbestos. The first group consisted of 100 men who had been exposed to asbestos for at least 10 years. The second group consisted of 100 men who had never been exposed to asbestos. The subjects were interviewed about their smoking habits, alcohol consumption, and other risk factors for coronary artery disease. The results showed that the prevalence of risk factors for coronary artery disease was significantly higher in the group of men who had been exposed to asbestos for at least 10 years compared to the group of men who had never been exposed to asbestos.

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.

The flowchart illustrates the sequential steps of product development. It begins with 'Idea' and 'Market research', which lead into 'Concept development'. This is followed by 'Design', 'Prototyping', 'Testing', 'Production', and finally 'Distribution'. Each step is contained within a rectangular box, and the process is connected by a series of downward-pointing arrows, indicating a linear progression from the initial idea to the final distribution of the product.
